

Hinting at Arms for South Africa

Civil Strife More Dangerous Than War, Heath Warns UN

By Robert Estabrook

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 23 (AP).—British Prime Minister Edward Heath told the General Assembly today that internal violence and civil war may be more of a danger to the 1970s than war between nations.

Without explicitly saying so, he also hinted that his new Conservative government intends to persevere in its announced intention to resume the sale of all arms to South Africa despite widespread protests.

He gave this hint by strongly emphasizing that "the United Nations cannot by some stroke of magic change one nation's deeply held views." Instead, he said, nations must seek to understand each other's point of view and "accept the good faith of those who disagree."

UN Votes Declaration Of Ideals

"Legitimacy of the struggle" of national liberation movements in such territories as Portuguese Angola, Mozambique and Guinea was given recognition.

Mr. Patrio said what the declaration amounted to was to "legitimize the use of violence in the Portuguese overseas provinces in flagrant violation of the UN Charter."

The Assembly's night session dragged on until almost 2 a.m. In the end it was agreed without any formal action that the document was simply adopted—not by vote or any majority or even a consensus. It will be presented to tomorrow's solemn ceremonies for formal "acclamation."

The Objectives

The two paragraphs in dispute read:

● Despite the UN's achievements in decolonization, many territories, notably Southern Rhodesia, Angola, Mozambique and Guinea-Bissau, continue to be denied self-determination "in deliberate and deplorable defiance of the UN and world opinion by certain recalcitrant states and by the illegal regime in Southern Rhodesia." We recognize "the legitimacy of the struggle of colonial peoples for their freedom by all appropriate means at their disposal."

● "We strongly condemn the evil policy of apartheid, which is a crime against the conscience and dignity of mankind and like Nazism is contrary to the principles of the Charter. We reaffirm our determination to spare no effort, including support to those who struggle against it, in accordance with the letter and the spirit of the Charter, to secure the elimination of apartheid in South Africa. We also condemn all forms of oppression and tyranny wherever they occur, racism and the practice of racial discrimination in all its manifestations."

Tories Register Strong Victory In a By-Election

LONDON, Oct. 23 (AP).—Prime Minister Edward Heath's new Conservative administration was given a shot in the arm today with a strong victory in a special election by a candidate campaigning for British membership in the European Common Market.

Voters in the traditionally Conservative district of St. Marylebone, in North London, registered a 1.8 percent swing toward the ruling party, compared with the June general election result.

Only 35.3 percent of the 47,713 electorate turned out, compared with 58 percent in June.

Winning candidate Kenneth Baker, 35, campaigned strenuously for membership in the Common Market. His main opponent, Laborite Keith Morrell, 29, opposed it.

It was the first local election called since Mr. Heath's Conservatives won power from Labor in June.

The vote was to fill a parliamentary vacancy caused by the elevation of veteran legislator Quintin Hogg to the peerage as lord chancellor, head of the English judiciary.

Mr. Baker, a banker and merchant, got 10,684 votes to Mr. Morrell's 4,542. Michael Vann, a Liberal, got 1,038 votes.

The victory gives the Conservatives a majority of 29 seats in the House of Commons. One more special election is pending.

Jordan Estimates War Damage To Guide U.S. on Possible Aid

By John L. Hess

AMMAN, Oct. 23 (NYT).—The United States has asked the Jordanian government for an estimate of the financial costs arising from last month's civil war, evidently to determine how much Washington may be called upon to meet. The figure will be high.

The reply to the American request has been drafted and is now before the Jordanian cabinet for approval. It contains the following estimates:

● The war caused a drop of $140 million in Jordan's gross national product of about $500 million.

● Indemnities for personal and property damage if the government decides to pay them—will come to $70 million, representing the cost of repairing public and private facilities and roughly $7 million for assistance of the wounded.

● The national budget, apart from military expenditures, will show a deficit of $28 million for 1970 and again for 1971. In addition, a $12 million deficit in the development program is envisaged for next year.

All this does not take into account cancellation of the Libyan subsidy and the suspension of the Kuwaiti subsidy to Jordan.

The estimate also ignores the damage done to business confidence. The climate of insecurity that prevails in Jordan is hardly conducive to investment.

The Palestinian middle class, which is the mainstay of Jordanian development, has suffered a severe moral blow. A small movement of emigration is under way, and it is visible in the crowded bookshelves of every outgoing flight from the Amman airport. A small merchant said this morning that he had asked his relatives in the Israeli-occupied West Bank area to seek permission for him to return there.

According to the official estimate, Jordan must raise $130 million to $135 million in the next 14 months simply to meet its civil budget and restore or indemnify the civil damages of the recent war.

"The military cost is a secret but not a problem," the United States is committed to replace all the losses and to continue a program of military aid, whose scope has not been disclosed. An airlift of arms has been under way since the end of the war and at least two shipments of arms have been delivered to Aqaba, Jordan's only port.

As for the financial need, the prospect of meeting it within the Arab world as in the past is dim indeed. Only Saudi Arabia is said to continue past help, but that aid is limited to a few million dollars. The United States has been complaining about the burden of its present commitment. It is not regarded as likely to increase its gifts, especially since an even wealthier donor—the United States—has taken Jordan under its wing.

Jordan has always had to live on subsidies. These were paid by the British until the mid-1950s, when Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Libya were prevailed upon to hand over "conscience money."

Chilean Congress to Elect Allende; Troops on the Alert

SANTIAGO, Chile, Oct. 23 (Reuters).—Troops and police were out in force today to ensure a peaceful congressional session tomorrow at which Marxist Salvador Allende is expected to be elected president of Chile.

The country was quiet today under a state of emergency called following the ambush and shooting yesterday of army commander in chief Gen. Rene Schneider, who is in critical condition at the Military Hospital.

Police sources said Gen. Schneider, 57, a friend of Mr. Allende, was attacked by ultrarightists who wanted to disrupt the congressional election to force an army takeover.

The army chief was struck by bullets in his forearm, thorax and neck, doctors said last night after a second operation.

Meanwhile, the United Popular Front of Communists and other leftists backing the 62-year-old Mr. Allende condemned the shooting, as did all other political parties.

The Leftist Revolutionary Movement (MLR) today said the shooting was part of a rightist revolutionary plot in which 2,000 gunmen were involved.

Mr. Allende won the presidential election on Sept. 4 with only 36.3 percent of the vote. Because he failed to get 50 percent, Congress must tomorrow choose either him or rightist Jorge Alessandri.

Santiago police chief Jorge Maldonado said today that seven people had been arrested in connection with the attack on Gen. Schneider.

He denied rumors that former detective was the author of the plot. The Central Labor Confederation today called a two-hour strike to condemn the shooting.

Soviet Union, Hanoi Sign Aid Accords

MOSCOW, Oct. 23 (UPI).—The Soviet Union and North Vietnam have signed new agreements providing Soviet military aid, economic aid and loans to Hanoi, the official Tass news agency said today.

Tass said the accords—using the plural word—were signed at the Kremlin today by Vice-Premier Nguyen Con of North Vietnam and Deputy Soviet Premier M.A. Mikheyev, in the presence of Premier Alexei N. Kosygin.

"Agreements were signed rendering economic and military aid and the allocation of credits to North Vietnam by the Soviet Union," it said.

"The new agreements signify further strengthening of the fraternal friendship between the Soviet and Vietnamese peoples and an expansion of cooperation between the Soviet Union and North Vietnam."

It was the third aid agreement between Moscow and Hanoi in a year. Mr. Kosygin and Pham Van Dong, North Vietnam's premier, signed agreements last October. The Soviets then announced last June 11 they had signed another agreement designed to beef up military assistance to North Vietnam in response to expanded U.S. military involvement in Indochina.

The United States has just sent troops into Cambodia at that time. The amount of Soviet aid was not disclosed. U.S. officials have estimated its value at a billion dollars a year in missiles, small arms, ammunition and a variety of non-military goods over the past several years.

Nixon's Ex-Guard Is Found Guilty Of Kidnapping

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 23 (Reuters).—A former Internal Revenue agent who once acted as bodyguard for President Nixon was today found guilty of a kidnapping involving the third largest ransom ever demanded in the United States.

Ronald Lee Miller, 38, was found guilty of kidnapping and armed robbery in the 1967 abduction of Kenneth Young, then 11, the son of a wealthy Beverly Hills financier, for $500,000 ransom.

Miller faces a possible death sentence.

The money, paid over by the boy's father, Herbert Young, president of Gibraltar Savings and Loan Association, has never been recovered.

The prosecution alleged the ransom was placed in a Swiss bank account.

Spanish Crash Kills 2

Thieu Asserts Saigon Won't Declare Unilateral Cease-Fire

VUNG TAU, South Vietnam, Oct. 23 (Reuters).—South Vietnam would never declare a unilateral cease-fire and only a bilateral, officially guaranteed, truce was acceptable to Saigon, President Nguyen Van Thieu said today.

Apparently irked by press reports speculating that the Saigon government might declare a unilateral cease-fire this month, he told reporters at this seaside resort city that his government was ready to implement President Nixon's five-point peace proposals.

"There will never be a unilateral cease-fire in Vietnam," he said.

"There must be a bilateral cease-fire respected by both sides and guaranteed and supervised officially," he said.

After flying from Washington to Floyd Bennett Field on Long Island, Mr. Nixon traveled by helicopter to the Wall Street area before proceeding by car to the UN. He entered the heavily-guarded General Assembly hall from the north and met individually for a moment with Assembly President Edvard Hambro of Norway and with Secretary General U Thant before the session.

Escorted to the rostrum by UN protocol chief Simon Korie, Mr. Nixon read rapidly through his speech without special emphasis. He received adequate but not unusual applause, and proceedings were disrupted for five minutes as delegates thronged to speak to him.

As he left the UN, Mr. Nixon went briefly to the United States mission before returning to the airport for the flight to Washington. Instead of beginning with a

Nixon's Address

UNITED NATIONS, Oct. 23 (AP).—Highlights from President Nixon's address today to the 25th anniversary session of the United Nations General Assembly:

- The issue of war and peace cannot be solved unless we in the United States and the Soviet Union demonstrate both the will and capacity to put our relationship on a basis consistent with the aspirations of mankind.
- We must transcend the old patterns of power politics. Power has a role in our relations. Our mutual obligation is to discipline that power.
- Despite the deep differences between ourselves and the Soviet Union... neither of us wants a nuclear exchange... Both should welcome the opportunity to reduce that [arms] burden... Both are major industrial powers which at present have too little trade or commercial contact with one another... The pressing economic and social needs around the world can give our [peaceful] competition a creative direction.
- The United States will do everything it can to help develop and strengthen the practical means that will enable the United Nations to move decisively to keep the peace.
- It is in the world interest that we cooperate in preserving and restoring our natural environment.
- Technology is ready to tap the vast, largely virgin resources of the oceans.
- As the UN enters its second Development Decade, it has both the responsibility and means to help nations control the population explosion...
- It is in the world interest that the narcotics traffic be curbed.
- It is in the world interest to put a decisive end to air piracy and the kidnapping and murder of diplomats.
- What we seek is not a Pax Americana; not an American century; but rather a structure of stability and progress that will enable each nation to chart its own course and to make its own way without outside interference...
- In the spirit of this 25th anniversary, the United States will go the extra mile in doing our part toward making the UN succeed.
- Let the guns fall silent and stay silent, in Southeast Asia... In the Middle East let us hold to the cease-fire and build a peace.
- Across this planet let us attack the ills that threaten peace. In our personal relations and in our international relations let us display the mutual respect that fosters peace.
- Above all, let us, as leaders of the world, reflect in our actions what our own people feel. Let us do what our own people need. Let us consider the world interest—the people's interest—in all that we do.

club," one source said. "Our plan to give certain select countries access to our enrichment technology is strictly a plan to keep them from getting there on their own, in a way that could make it a lot easier for these countries to make atomic weapons."

There are other reasons for the move to share nuclear know-how, including the fact that the United States will not have enough enriched uranium to supply the needs of its atomic power plants in ten years' time.

Today, the United States dominates the atomic fuel market. It even exports enriched uranium to Britain and France, which have their own plants making uranium for nuclear weapons but which are unable to enrich uranium cheaply enough and in sufficient quantities to supply their atomic power plants.

While only a $150 million-a-year business today, the world wide atomic fuel market is expected to surpass $1 billion a year in five years. The market for Japan alone is forecast at $400 million and for Western Europe at $1 billion a year by 1985.

vent the need for a gas diffusion plant by building plants to enrich uranium by gas centrifuge, a method first tried by the United States in World War II and discarded because it couldn't be made to work in a hurry.

The centrifuge technique calls for whirling uranium hexafluoride gas in drums at speeds of more than 1,000 miles an hour. Centrifugal force carries the heavier U-238 to the outside of the drum while U-235 is left in the center, leaving the lighter U-235 at the center.

One advantage to centrifuge is that it takes a seventh of the electricity that it takes to run a gas diffusion plant. The Europeans are also convinced that a workable centrifuge plant can be built for as little as $300 million, in contrast to a $1 billion price tag put on a comparable gas diffusion plant.

In battle action, the command reported today the loss of two

U.S. spokesmen said three men were wounded Wednesday when a UH-1 Huey helicopter shot down over jungles 341 miles northeast of Saigon. Another UH-1 was hit yesterday 126 miles west of Saigon and five miles from the Cambodian border. The U.S. escaped injury.

Communiques from Phnom Penh said a Viet Cong killed a Cambodian troop 50 miles from Phnom Penh and blew up an ammunition train in the ambush of a convoy miles southwest of Phnom Penh.

Laird Says Money Should Be Sent Abroad, Not GI's

CHICAGO, Oct. 23 (UPI).—U.S. Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said yesterday that American money and American supplies should begin replacing American troops stationed overseas.

In a speech before the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations, Mr. Laird called for a substantial increase in foreign military assistance that would make it possible to bring more U.S. troops home.

"It is better to supply American equipment than American troops. It reduces the chances that Americans will have to fight in the future... and it is far less expensive," Mr. Laird said.

Mr. Laird also said that military leaders believe that the U.S. Sixth Fleet stationed in the Mediterranean was instrumental in averting hostilities in Jordan.

Quebec Police 'Raiding Blind' Hunt for Cross, Kidnappers

QUEBEC, Oct. 23 (Reuters).—Quebec police today acknowledged that they have reached a point in their 18-day search for a missing diplomat, James Cross, who was kidnapped by extremists of the Liberation Front (FLQ), that the resources at their disposal are the most massive of its time by combined army forces, an officer said. Investigators had "run out of ideas" in their search for two men who are wanted in connection with the kidnapping and death of Cross, Quebec Minister Pierre Laporte, whose body was found last Saturday.

Police said the two men—Marc Carbonneau, 37, and Paul Rose, 27—may have successfully dodged the dragnet by altering their appearance.

A fresh set of pictures drawn by a police artist have been issued, showing what the men might now look like.

Police said their search has been hampered by an unusual number of hoax telephone calls and false tips, indicative of the near-hysteria which has swept the province since the kidnapping drama began on Oct. 5.

Several people have been detained in the last few days and charged with obstructing the work of the police. Some had pretended to be FLQ spokesmen, while others had claimed to have been victims of FLQ assaults.

The case with which the kidnappers have been able to elude the police appeared to confirm hints by the authorities in the past week that the FLQ does not comprise only a few terrorists but that it can rely on a well-organized network of disaffected sympathizers who are able to provide them with hideouts.

Jets Called In

Fighter-bombers have been called in to help in the widespread hunt for the missing diplomat. An undisclosed number of Royal Canadian Air Force CF-18 fighter-bombers are being used for photo-reconnaissance missions as part of the hunt, a Defense Department spokesman said.

He said the jets, in low-level flights over the southern half of the province, were strip-filming land below in attempts to spot any activity.

Nevertheless, police have drawn

Meany Assails White House's Policy Errors

By Frank C. Porter

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (WP).—Mr. Meany dispelled any impression of a labor flirtation with Nixon administration last night, charging that America has "backslid" the past two years of the White House's "right-sighted and mistaken policies."

He made an oblique reference to recent campaign speeches by Vice-President Agnew and others, the AFL-CIO president urged workers to "mediate" conservative candidates in the "phony issues" such as the streets, big spending, permissiveness.

It was Mr. Meany's strongest attack to date on the administration, which, on occasion, he has seemed to have cordial relations. At a Labor Day dinner at the White House for union leaders, Mr. Meany had warmly toasted Nixon for his dedication to "the American way of life."

He has repeatedly supported the White House in its foreign policy, particularly in Southeast Asia.

Cue From Agnew

And last month, he appeared to be a cue from Mr. Agnew himself, assailing permissiveness, young men and the "egg heads," professors and "gutless politicians" sympathetic with them.

He said his political career had been a "quest for a better life" and that he had been "driven out of the GOP on such a bad note as higher wages and better living conditions."

He said he was "not a man of words" and that he was "not a man of words."

He said he was "not a man of words" and that he was "not a man of words."

Some Released

Under strong pressure from local separatist circles in Quebec, police have now begun releasing some of the more than 300 people detained under the War Measures Act. But some leading figures, including Robert Lemieux, who represented the kidnappers in negotiations with the government, and leading separatist spokesmen Pierre Duhon and Charles Gagnon, remain under lock and key.

Political observers believe the FLQ is keeping silent about Mr. Cross because they plan some dramatic move to steal the thunder from the police in Sunday's Montreal city council elections.

Despite the massive hunt for the kidnappers, attention has switched to the elections following allegations that one of the parties in the running is a cover for the FLQ.

Jean Drapeau, Montreal's mayor for the past eight years, "warned" yesterday that "blood would run in the streets" if the recently formed Political Action Front (PRAF)—fielding 31 candidates for the 46-member city council—won the election.

Front Organization

He echoed an allegation, later modified by federal Regional Affairs Minister Jean Marchand that PRAF was a "front" organization for the outlawed FLQ.

Mr. Marchand, recognized as No. 2 in Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's administration, also claimed in a radio interview on Wednesday that the FLQ wanted to disrupt the elections by explosions, further kidnappings or even shootings.

PRAF, a socialist-inclined separatist movement, admits supporting the FLQ's social, economic and political aims. But it has refused to associate itself with the terror tactics employed in the double kidnapping.

PRAF president Paul Cluche described Mr. Drapeau's allegation as "ridiculous." He claimed the mayor—who backed Mr. Trudeau's declaration of emergency war measures because of the kidnappings—was resorting to psychological terrorism.

Two PRAF candidates were among the 46 people released yesterday after being detained under the emergency act. About 280 others are still held.

U.S. Security Official Sees How Europe Guards Airports

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (AP).—A visit to several European airports has convinced the new U.S. director of civil aviation security that screening of air travelers abroad is extremely thorough—perhaps a bit too thorough.

Benjamin O. Davis Jr., a retired U.S. Air Force lieutenant general, accompanied U.S. Transportation Secretary John A. Volpe on a recent European visit.

On his return, Mr. Davis observed that the level of security at Rome, Zurich, Amsterdam, Paris, London and Shannon was "so high—that it was not likely to meet the approval of most Americans."

Threshold of Annoyance

"We seem to have a very low threshold of annoyance," Mr. Davis remarked.

An aide said today Mr. Davis was referring particularly to Orly at Paris, where a French guard with a tommygun watched while Mr. Davis was "thoroughly shaken down (searched)" by a French employee of Trans World Airlines.

Some members of the party questioned whether such a severe search was merited in the case of a three-star general—although in civilian clothes—who also happens to be the chief of aviation security in the United States.

"Some of the actions currently being taken at Zurich, Frankfurt, Orly, Amsterdam and Heathrow (London) are not necessary today at Dulles (Washington) or Kennedy (New York), but we must be prepared to take some of these actions if the need arises," he asserted.

IN GEAR AGAIN—Andrian Nikolayev and Vitali Sevastianov, the two Soviet cosmonauts who set an orbiting endurance record aboard Soyuz-9 last year, stand behind astronaut space suits props in Houston to be photographed for the folks back home. The two cosmonauts, who are visiting the Manned Spacecraft Center, delivered a paper to the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics on the results of their flight. They also said that the Soviet Union will launch more endurance flights to test man's capabilities before sending up a space station.

GOP Accused Of 'Politics of Fear' Tactics

By Don Oberdorfer

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (WP).—The Democratic party's National Chairman, Lawrence F. O'Brien, charged yesterday that the Republican party—under the direction of President Nixon—is waging a calculated "politics of fear" campaign to exploit social ills for partisan advantage.

"With our institutions under question and attack from all sides, our leaders seek merely to convert the ailments of our society—which they should be working to heal—into political gains," Mr. O'Brien declared in an address to the National Press Club.

He compared the Republican campaign for next month's congressional election with the political attacks of the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy in the 1950s, and called it "a national tragedy" and "a vicious game."

In an emotional departure from his prepared text, Mr. O'Brien invoked the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy and Sen. Robert F. Kennedy to refute suggestions that the Democratic party condones violence and extremism and does not believe in law and order.

Most of his speech, however, was a hard, gloves-off attack on the President, Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew and "the most lavishly financed Republican off-year campaign in history."

He charged "there is a critical breakdown of popular confidence in the kind of President who would send forth a programmed conspiracy among us to preach the politics of fear, the joys of positive polarization."

Rail Strike in N.Y.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (UPI).—The Long Island Railroad, which carries 90,000 commuters daily, closed down early today when three unions staged a wildcat strike.

Nixon Releases School Funds Congress Passed Over Veto

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (WP).—The Nixon administration announced yesterday that it was releasing $498 million in education funds that Congress appropriated over the President's veto two months ago and the White House then held up.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Elliot L. Richardson smiled as he said, in response to a question at a press conference, that there was "no connection whatsoever" between the release of the funds and the off-year elections, now 12 days away.

School spending has been an issue between congressional Democrats and the Republican White House for two years now.

Two weeks ago, Democrats led by chairman Carl D. Perkins, D-Ky., of the House Education and Labor Committee, revived the issue, attacked the holdup of this year's disputed funds as illegal and harmful, and urged the White House to find other fields than education in which to fight inflation.

Congress appropriated about $4.4 billion for education this fiscal year, about $450 million more than the President asked. The President vetoed the appropriations bill as inflationary, but Congress overrode the veto in mid-August.

The $450 million was a net increase. Congress actually approved an increase of about $565 million for various specific education programs, but offset these with other specific cutbacks.

The administration released part of the $565 million earlier this month, about $66 million for college student loans. The money released yesterday was the balance.

The largest single amount was $106.9 million for compensatory education, extra school services for needy neighborhoods. Also in yesterday's total were $64 million for vocational education, $56 million for science equipment, $43 million for college construction and $111 million in impact aid, which goes to school districts educating children of federal employees.

Leary Yet to Get Algeria Asylum, Called 'in Transit'

ALGERIA, Oct. 23 (UPI).—Algerian officials said U.S. drug advocate Timothy Leary has not received political asylum in Algeria yet despite earlier announcements he had arrived to work with U.S. Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver.

The exact status of Leary and even his whereabouts were shrouded in mystery. Cleaver and his officials refused to discuss the situation. They merely said, "Leary is in transit."

Cleaver scheduled a press conference yesterday at which he was to present Leary and Bernardine Dohrn, member of the militant Weathermen group in the United States, but the news conference was postponed. The Black Panther officials also hedged on their announcement that Miss Dohrn had arrived. No newsmen has seen Leary to confirm his presence here.

Algerian sources indicated the news conference was put off and Leary's alleged request to remain here was unsettled because government officials were unhappy with widespread attention in foreign news media to the U.S. drug promoter's joining the growing circle of political exiles here.

Capote Freed; Health Cited

SANTA ANA, Calif., Oct. 23 (AP).—Author Truman Capote, 46, stubble-bearded and looking tired, was released from jail a day after yesterday after his doctor said he was worried about Mr. Capote's health.

Mr. Capote, given a three-day sentence for contempt of court, was freed by Superior Court Judge Byron K. McMillan, who said Mr. Capote's personal physician in New York City had called and "expressed apprehension about Mr. Capote's health."

After Tests on Dogs

2 Kinds of Birth-Control Pill Withdrawn by U.S. Drug Firms

By Harold M. Schmeck Jr.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (NTT).—Two brands of birth-control pills are being discontinued because certain of their chemical constituents appear to have been linked with breast changes in dogs.

The voluntary action by two manufacturers, Eli Lilly and Co. and the Upjohn Co., was made public today by the Food and Drug Administration.

The two companies confirmed that they had mailed letters to the nation's doctors telling them that manufacture of the two oral contraceptives would be halted.

The Eli Lilly product is called C-Quens. Upjohn's carries the trade name Provest.

[Together the two brands account for an estimated 15 to 20 percent of the oral contraceptive market, the Associated Press said.]

In a public announcement, Dr. Charles C. Edwards, Commissioner of Food and Drugs, commended the firms for their action and said it was "the only prudent course."

He emphasized that there was no cause for alarm among patients and said women taking either of the two products should continue doing so until their doctors tell them to change.

Animal Studies

The FDA has required long-term animal studies of the active chemicals in all birth-control pills as part of a continuing surveillance program. During these studies it was found that beagles developed nodules in their breasts when fed large doses of two chemicals, one of which is an active ingredient in Provest. The other is in C-Quens.

The breast nodules were not cancerous. They appeared to be similar to benign nodules that appear in beagle breasts in the natural course of things. But in the dogs under study they appeared earlier and in significantly greater numbers than in untreated dogs.

The substance used in the Lilly product is called chlormadinone acetate. Provest contains medroxyprogesterone acetate.

Other birth-control drugs do not contain these chemicals. The drug agency's view is that the two contraceptives that contain them offer no advantages over other available drugs and that, therefore, they should be discontinued.

"Nonetheless," Dr. Edwards said, "it is prudent to act on information which differentiates these drugs from other oral contraceptives."

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 23 (Reuters).—Dr. Kurt Waldheim of Austria was unanimously elected chairman yesterday of the UN Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space. Dr. Waldheim, a former foreign minister, was chairman of the UN Outer Space Committee from 1964 to 1968.

The generation gap

Our first generation of designers grew up hand in hand with motor racing. There was scarcely any race course where a BMW didn't take home the prize. That's why our cars are so sporty. Our present generation of designers get the merits for the functional design of the BMW. They were convinced that the pleasures of styling and interior fittings can be combined with performance.

So one generation wants to get you into a BMW by offering wonderful body styling and a comfortable interior, and the other wants to stop you from getting out by offering marvellous acceleration, roadability and braking capacity. Incidentally, you may not even want to get out. This is the reason why our cars are not just limousines and not just sports cars. They're both in one.

For Slandering the State

5 Years in Siberia for Soviet Mathematician

By Bernard Gwertzman
MOSCOW, Oct. 23 (NYT).—Bevot I. Pimenov, a Leningrad mathematician, was sentenced last night by a Soviet court to five years exile for slandering the Soviet state.

U.S. Considers
Newsman's Ouster
'Unjustified'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (AP).—The State Department said today that it considers the expulsion from the Soviet Union of John Dornberg, Moscow bureau chief of Newsweek magazine, "unjustified."

Yesterday, press officer John King said an official of the Soviet Foreign Ministry informed the U.S. Embassy in Moscow that Mr. Dornberg was asked to leave the Soviet Union in two to three days. The Soviet official alleged Mr. Dornberg made available the mimeograph facilities of his bureau to reproduce anti-Soviet leaflets.

The embassy expressed doubt that Mr. Dornberg was engaged in such activities. Mr. King said, "We consider him an experienced newsman and his expulsion unjustified. We seek further information before deciding what steps to take."

Authorities were apparently disturbed by Dr. Pimenov's dissemination of verbatim accounts of meetings he had with officials critical of his activities. At one such meeting in April, V.A. Medvedev, the Leningrad party official in charge of ideology, was said to have warned Dr. Pimenov that Soviet authorities would not permit people to write "anything that comes into their heads."

Also sentenced to five years exile was Boris B. Vail, a worker in a puppet theater in Kiev, who in 1967 had been one of a group of students, including Dr. Pimenov, who received lengthy terms for political activity.

A third defendant, Valentina I. Zinov'yeva, who was reported to have testified against Dr. Pimenov and Mr. Vail, received a probationary sentence of one year.

For at least part of the trial, the noted nuclear physicist Andrei D. Sakharov was said to have been an observer in the courtroom.

Dr. Sakharov had taken an interest in the case of Dr. Pimenov, whose theoretical works on kinematic spaces had been thought important enough to be translated into English. Dr. Pimenov had worked with the Leningrad Mathematics Institute before his arrest in July.

The details of Dr. Pimenov's exile have not been made known. Generally those sent into exile must reproduce anti-Soviet leaflets.

4 Fishermen Lost

live in remote parts of western Siberia. The exile punishment is a carryover into Soviet law of the czarist custom of dealing with political dissidents.

Dr. Pimenov's arrest and conviction followed the seizure by authorities of a large amount of material, including some underground writings, from his apartment in Leningrad last April. Article 190.1 of the Russian Code, promulgated in 1958, as a weapon against dissidents, makes it a crime to spread "deliberately false fabrications and defamations" against the Soviet state and public order, or to take part in "systematic spreading in oral form of deliberately false fabrications and defamations of the Soviet state and social system."

Normal punishment under this article is up to three years' deprivation of freedom in a prison camp or in a jail. But exile, which is regarded as a milder punishment, can be substituted up to five years.

19 Policemen Hurt
At Berlin Pop Concert

WEST BERLIN, Oct. 23 (Reuters).—Nineteen policemen were nursing injuries today after trying to stop some 300 fans from storming Neue Welt Hall here when tickets ran out for a pop concert by a British group, "Spooky Tooth."

The youths, hurling stones, explosives and stink bombs, were fought back last night by police using truncheons and tear gas. Small groups of youths later went on a window-smashing spree in the vicinity of the concert hall, attacking police cars, hurling stones at shops. Police detained 23 of them. Damage was put at $50,000.

Nations Respond to Philippines Relief Plea

MANILA, Oct. 23 (UPI).—Pledges of assistance from world capitals worsted postwar disaster to hit us. The death toll soared beyond 1,000 and was still rising as reports reached Manila from isolated areas.

As of 5 p.m. today, Mrs. Loreo Paras Sult, Philippines Red Cross secretary-general, said, confirmed deaths totaled 1,182—526 caused by and 656 by Seng.

A total of 439 persons were missing and 994 injured as a result of the two typhoons, she said.

Mrs. Sult said that 37,880 homes were destroyed or damaged, affecting 522,207 persons. Losses to crops and property were estimated at about $75 million.

She said that this figure was expected to increase.

She said that the latest response to the Philippines appeal for assistance came from Japan and Canada. She said that the Japanese Red Cross was airlifting 1,000 blankets and 5,543 items of clothing, while the Canadian Red Cross was contributing 8,000 towels. She said that the American Red Cross Society also pledged cash contributions for purchase of relief goods for the typhoon victims.

Earlier, the Soviet Union said that it was airlifting blankets and textiles by way of Tokyo, while Singapore said that it was donating children's clothing.

Brandt, Scheel Make Display
Of Confidence in Continuity

By David Binder

BONN, Oct. 23 (NYT).—Chancellor Willy Brandt and his coalition partner, Foreign Minister Walter Scheel, held a joint press conference today to demonstrate confidence that they could surmount opposition pressure and continue governing until their term runs out in 1972.

But at the very moment they were crowing and glowing, the Bundestag—the upper house of parliament—rejected the administration's bill to liberalize laws regulating production and distribution of pornography.

The vote of 21-to-20 in the Bundestag, in which West Germany's 11 state governments are represented, demonstrated the severity of the Brandt-Scheel government's problem in pushing through the ambitious reform legislation. The pornography bill must now go to an inter-parliamentary mediation committee for redrafting.

Vow to Continue
At their meeting with the press, both the chancellor and the foreign minister, chairmen respectively of the governing Social and Free Democratic parties, vowed to continue their alliance and their program to the end of the legislative period.

Mr. Brandt said he was prepared to govern with a majority of one if necessary. The Social and Free Democrats presently have a majority of six in the 495-seat lower house, or Bundestag, following the defection of three Free Democrats to a conservative bloc.

Mr. Scheel rejoined that even though his party's 27 deputies represented only a "small hand bearing a heavy burden," he was certain of holding on. He said West Germany should be aware that the alternative would be "the division of the nation into two camps."

He and Mr. Scheel took pains to dismiss "connections" between the coalition's longevity and upcoming state elections in Hesse and Bavaria in which the Free Democrats are expected to suffer losses. "There is no direct connection," said Mr. Scheel.

Both leaders also painted a rosy picture of West Germany's domestic economic situation and its external security. "It is simply not true that we are living in inflation," said the chancellor.

"The situation has improved," said Mr. Scheel.

The chancellor added that West Germany's treaty with the Soviet Union has "contributed to a slight improvement of the situation" of West Germany's security, despite the lack of ratification by the parliament here.

Samson François

Samson François,
French Concert
Pianist, Is Dead

PARIS, Oct. 23 (AP).—Samson François, a French pianist who interpreted Chopin, Debussy, Bach and Mozart for international audiences, died last night in a Paris hotel.

Mr. François, 46, who apparently died of a heart ailment, suffered an attack in the Intercontinental Hotel where he lived.

Mr. François was born in Frankfurt, Germany, and studied in Italy, Yugoslavia and France. He played in the Lamoureux concert group and beginning in 1947, traveled widely.

Mr. François was a child prodigy who gave his first concert at the age of six. In 1943 he won a top French musical award, the Prix Marguerite Long-Jaques Thibaud. Since the late 1940s he had followed the life of a concert pianist on constant tour, visiting every continent almost every year. He was best known for his interpretations of Chopin.

Mr. François composed a piano concerto which was played in 1951 at the Aix-en-Provence festival. He made many recordings, of which critics found the most noteworthy to be his brilliant renderings of Ravel.

Manson, Cheery,
Back at Trial

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 23 (AP).—Charles Manson, smiling clean-shaven, with a cheery "good morning" for the judge—returned with his three women co-defendants to the Sharon Tate murder trial yesterday after three weeks of banishment.

The four were removed for interrupting proceedings and chanting. On one occasion, Manson lunged at the judge. They have been listening proceedings via a loudspeaker in adjoining rooms. The judge told them they could return any time they agreed to behave. However, there was no public indication he had made such an agreement.

U.K. Coal Crisis Is Averted
As Miners Vote Down Strike

By Alfred Friendly

LONDON, Oct. 23 (WV).—British coal miners failed to give the requisite two-thirds majority vote for a nationwide strike urged by their union leaders, it was announced today.

The vote, participated in by 388,000 of Britain's 285,000 colliery workers, spared the country what had been universally forecast as a national disaster. The ballot, supervised by an independent professional election organization, showed a 55 per cent majority in favor, well short of the 67 per cent needed to authorize what would have been the country's first total coal stoppage since the General Strike of 1926.

With only a six-week supply of coal above ground for electric generating plants, 75 per cent of Britain's industry had been faced with a swift shutdown.

Even though the strike vote failed, it is expected that there will be a rash of wildcat walkouts from individual pits over the miners' demand for a weekly wage increase averaging about $12. The National Coal Board, the administrator of the state-owned industry, has offered about half that much.

It is assumed that the union will now resume negotiations with the Coal Board that it had previously refused, after what it termed a "disgusting" offer. Alternatively, it may accept the suggestion of Coal Board Chairman Lord Robins to use arbitration machinery, leading to a binding award contained in the union agreement with the board.

The vote badly undercuts the authority and control of the National Union of Miners executive leadership, and may lead to considerable organizational chaos before the dust settles.

On the other hand, it powerfully bolsters the new Conservative government's campaign to prevent further massive wage increases and call a halt to the nation's current runaway wage inflation. Conceivably, it could mark the "turning of the corner" on wage increases, now running at more than 12 per cent annually, that the government has been hoping to achieve.

Londoners Left Cold

LONDON, Oct. 23 (UPI).—A band of heating plant workers walked off their jobs and left some 20,000 Londoners slightly above freezing tonight.

It was the second night in a row the tenants of some 60 city-owned apartment complexes had to do without heat because of the 38-hour strike called by 40 plant workers seeking higher pay.

The workers said their "token" strike would end tomorrow morning.

Four important facts
before buying a tax-free
car in Europe

1. Not all delivery schemes are alike. The Volvo scheme is better than most. It offers you quick delivery of a brand new Volvo, free of tax and duty. When you collect the car it's registered, insured, tank filled and ready to drive. Virtually no paper work to worry you. We take care of all that—including the home shipment of your Volvo at extremely favourable rates.

2. The car's as good as the plan that brings it to you. Even if a car manufacturer has a delivery plan as good as Volvo's, it's not much good if the car itself doesn't deliver. A Volvo is a car with an international reputation for quality. In country after country, motoring critics have acclaimed Volvo's standards in safety, comfort, engineering and road-holding. And in an age when few things seem to last very long, it's nice to have a car that thinks nothing of giving its owner trouble-free service year after year.

3. Ordering a Volvo is so easy. Contact one of the Volvo agents listed below and ask for the tax-free delivery specialist. He'll assist you in all possible ways. Or see your nearest Volvo dealer. He can give you full information about the Volvo tax-free delivery scheme.

Britain Seeks Amendments In Airbus Deal

Weights New Position Of European Builders

PARIS, Oct. 23.—Britain today proposed several amendments to terms offered by France, Germany and the Netherlands on the $500-million Airbus project and then withdrew to consider a new position offered by the three.

The new position, in essence, was that the British decision should be made in view of the British application to join the Common Market. A French news agency reported that the British delegation decided that new consultations in London were necessary.

During a three-hour meeting here today, Britain offered the amendments which would assure that its Rolls-Royce Co. would participate in engine development for the plane. But there was no report on French, German and Dutch reactions.

It was reported, however, that the three delegations were impressed by the "precision" of the British offer and felt that fixing the next meeting date for next Wednesday in London was a favorable sign.

EEC Link Under

It was not immediately known what was meant by tying British participation to the Common Market talks. Wednesday, however, President Georges Pompidou said that he took British actions on both the Concorde and Airbus projects as a test of British "European" outlook.

France, Germany and the Netherlands are determined to win Britain back into the project from which the Labor government withdrew. For Britain, the decision would mean abandoning the BAC-3-11 project to develop a rival Airbus at a cost of about $350,000.

France and West Germany now pay 47 percent each with the Netherlands putting up the remaining 6 percent.

The Continental builders want Britain to come in as a full partner and in this event the French, West German and British governments would each contribute 30 percent of overall expenditure.

But Britain, if it did come in, would account for more than 60 percent of the work with Rolls-Royce building the engines and Hawker-Siddeley the wings for the aircraft, which is expected to be in commercial operation in 1974.

British Plane Urged

LONDON, Oct. 23 (Reuters).—Britain would profit better by building its own short-haul Airbus rather than join in a project with other European nations, according to a report issued today.

The report was issued by an organization that conducted a computer-based inquiry on behalf of the British Aircraft Corp.

The company currently is seeking government aid for its projected BAC 3-11 Airbus—a wide-bodied 240-seat craft designed for short-range routes.

The report estimated that opting for the BAC 3-11 would create 40,000 more jobs in Britain and earn $36 million tax revenue as well as $218 million in exports. This was based on projected sales of 280 aircraft.

The report said that Britain's balance of payments would be $550 million worse off if the European Airbus had to be bought and $648 million down if Britain had to buy the American Lockheed Tri-star.

Walkout in Italy Disrupts Cities' Bus Schedules

ROME, Oct. 23 (UPI).—Bus drivers in Rome, Florence, Bologna and other cities struck today, forcing millions of commuters to change travel plans—or stay home.

Alitalia Airline pilots threatened a new 48-hour strike but did not immediately carry it out. Several flights were delayed anyway.

A group of employees at the Sacred Heart University in Rome staged a protest demonstration in St. Peter's Square to demand higher pay.

Other strikes, by industrial workers in Milan and elsewhere, were held without incident except in the city of Bari. There, left-wing and right-wing students soured during a protest march in support of higher pay for industrial workers.

2 Countries Restore Warm Ties

Tito-Pompidou Talks Heal Old Rift

By James Goldsborough

PARIS, Oct. 23.—France and Yugoslavia took a look at the rest of the world today from what official sources described as the "original position" of each country.

This unusual language emerged from Yugoslav President Tito's one-day visit here, his first since 1956. Relations between the two countries were cool during much of the Fifth Republic.

The language and subjects of discussion today indicated that the situation had improved. While the sources said that the two presidents accepted the different social regimes in each country, they said that the "independent" position of each country presented similarities.

The last four weeks have been busy ones for the 78-year-old Tito. On Sept. 21, he designated a deputy president to eventually succeed him and on Sept. 30 he received President Nixon. This month he world conference in Lusaka, Zambia, to Brussels, Bonn and via.

The Hague. He will go to Rome in December.

According to reliable sources, Marshal Tito has made many of the same points in the other Western capitals. He has been stressing the need for Washington French Defense Minister Michel Debré today held talks on arms aggression in the Middle East with his West German counterpart Helmut Schmidt at the Mediterranean. He believes that ministry here. Before returning to the Middle East conflict has been Paris Mr. Debré was to meet directly responsible for the Soviet Chancellor Willy Brandt.

Debré, Schmidt Talk

BONN, Oct. 23 (Reuters).—French Defense Minister Michel Debré today held talks on arms aggression in the Middle East with his West German counterpart Helmut Schmidt at the Mediterranean. He believes that ministry here. Before returning to the Middle East conflict has been Paris Mr. Debré was to meet directly responsible for the Soviet Chancellor Willy Brandt.

naval buildup in the Mediterranean and that this buildup is not healthy for Yugoslavia.

Many observers think that his latest moves have been to provide insurance against any Soviet moves when he decides to step down. It is thought that, although he has not yet named a date to retire, he may have one in mind. In this line, he has been mending fences with those Western countries with which he has had differences.

France and Italy, for example—and is using this round of talks to rally Western Europe firmly behind his policy of independence.

Peace in Europe

French sources said today that in addition to the Middle East the two men discussed the "conditions of peace in Europe" and problems of the non-aligned countries.

Marshal Tito told President Pompidou that French policy toward the non-aligned nations had been praised during the recent third-world conference in Lusaka, Zambia, to Brussels, Bonn and via.

The European part of the discussions was focused on the subject of a security conference, which Yugoslavia, like Romania, backs as a confirmation of independence from Russia. Mr. Pompidou, although he was more positive on the subject during his recent trip to Moscow than in the past, still links an improvement in the Berlin situation to preparations for a conference.

Over the last few years, France and Yugoslavia, despite their policies of independence, never could appreciably improve the bilateral relations that soured during the Algerian war. Although Gen. Charles de Gaulle's termination of the war set the stage for improvement, his subsequent flirtation with the East seemed to several Eastern European countries to be directed at Moscow rather than them.

Observers felt that it was this kind of consideration that kept Marshal Tito from beginning his trip in Paris. Bonn—despite Marshal Tito's desire to talk about the Ostpolitik—also could not come first. Rome was not scheduled until December. So Brussels was selected.

The difficulties with France may be ending. Marshal Tito had long held against Gen. de Gaulle the Free French support of Yugoslav royalists during World War II. Under Mr. Pompidou, this can be forgotten. Today, the French president accepted an invitation to visit Yugoslavia. He said that he regretted that he could not make the trip next year.

Italy Urging EEC to Issue Free-Trade Warning to U.S.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 23 (Reuters).—Italian Foreign Trade Minister Mario Zagari said here yesterday that Italy is pressing the Common Market to issue a declaration upholding free-trade principles in the face of the protectionist threat from the United States.

Mr. Zagari, here for talks with top officials of the Common Market's Executive Commission, told reporters Italy wants the community to spell out the counter-measures it could take if restrictive trade legislation being prepared in the United States were adopted by Congress.

The Italian delegation will call on the other five member states to make the declaration when the Council of Ministers of the Six meets in Luxembourg Monday.

Italy would be one of the community's members to suffer most from the Mills bill, aimed at cutting U.S. imports of textiles, and footwear and named after Wilbur Mills, D. Ark., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. Zagari said he wanted the declaration to impress on official and public opinion in the United States the seriousness with which the situation is regarded in Europe.

The Six have been invited by Olivier Long, director general of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade to meet the United States, Japan and Britain at a second round of talks in Geneva to discuss ways of avoiding a trade war.

Informed sources here said opinion in the community is divided on the usefulness of such a meeting.

Certain members, particularly France, feel that no useful purpose can be served at present and that to hold a meeting which achieved nothing would be worse than not going to Geneva at all.

At Monday's session in Luxembourg the foreign ministers will hear a report from Rolf Dahrendorf, member of the community's executive commission in charge of external relations, who met U.S. commerce officials in Washington earlier this month.

Schumann: EEC Open

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 23 (Reuters).—French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann told the General Assembly today that the European Economic Community remains open to all who wish to join.

It is necessary, not only because of concern to preserve the balance in the world, but because of concern to "maintain and heighten the values of civilization which enrich all mankind," he said.

Mr. Schumann said that the first fruits of Gen. Charles de Gaulle's policy of détente are beginning to appear in West and East.

This policy meant refusing to set one part of Europe or of the world against the other. It meant, he said, instituting "a more real and more genuine security than the balance of terror, and the guarantee—even if they are temporary—necessary of the system of military alliances."

Ex-Nun Charged In Subnormal Children's Deaths

ROME, Oct. 23 (Reuters).—An Italian ex-nun and her sister were ordered yesterday to stand trial on charges of "complicity in maltreatment leading to death" in the cases of children who died in an institute the former nun ran outside Rome. It was an institute for subnormal youngsters.

Former nun Maria Diletta Pagliuca and her sister, Antonietta, face possible sentences of 12 to 30 years in jail if convicted of the charges brought by a magistrate following investigations that lasted 16 months. Three others were ordered to trial in the case.

Miss Pagliuca, who was director of the Santa Rita Institute at Grottaferrata, was also charged with fraudulently obtaining donations intended for the institute.

She was arrested last June when police entered the Santa Rita Institute, and in one room reportedly found 15 children chained to their beds in pairs. The children, and 13 others in another room, showed signs of beatings, undernourishment and neglect, police said. During subsequent investigations, the bodies of several children who had died at the institute over a period of years were exhumed, and doctors allegedly found signs of maltreatment.

Italian Reds Suffer More Defections

ROME, Oct. 23 (Reuters).—The Italian Communist party, the best in the West, lost a further 23 members today as defections by enchanted supporters continued.

In the last 24 hours, the party, which has about 1.5 million members in the whole of Italy, received resignations of 23 members. The defections were concentrated in the northern region of northern Italy, including several leading Communist dignitaries.

In days ago, 86 party members resigned in the Rome area.

Although the numbers of defections are small in comparison with total party membership, they privately taken very seriously by Communist leaders because they are the largest defections the party has experienced for several years.

They also include figures of considerable weight in local party organizations.

All the defectors have joined the Center Manifesto Group, which accused the leadership of "offering revolutionary principles in order to seek power through elementary means."

The Naples group sent a joint letter to the party accusing it of "not but irreversibly moving away from a class and revolutionary policy."

The three leaders of the Manifesto Group—Rossana Rossanda, Luigi Pintor and Aldo Natoli—were expelled from the party last year.

There has been a nationwide rise of members opposed to the official party line over the last year but there are no estimates of their numbers nor of those who have resigned.

The party maintains that the Manifesto Group represents no real threat and that it will never grow into a political force.

Italian Cabinet Drafts Decree to Defeat Fiscal Filibuster

ROME, Oct. 23 (NYT).—The cabinet of Francesco De Martino today countered a parliamentary filibuster that threatened anti-inflation policy and its by performing some adroit procedural footwork.

The cabinet prepared to re-enact, in minor changes, a fiscal law that would have expired today unless converted into law by Parliament. The current filibuster by the opposition virtually rules out such a conversion before the time.

The revised version of the decree the cabinet elaborated today to give it another 60 days to get the approval of Parliament. The enactment of the substitute is expected on Monday.

The new 11-week-old government into government under the threat of emergency powers, used new surtaxes including on gasoline, to raise additional revenue and curb consumer spending. It also introduced measures at spurring production.

The 23 years since the present constitution took effect, there have been very few instances of a government resorting to two consecutive emergency decrees in the matter. However, if the 27 decree had become ineffective, economic problems at

Bartok Memorabilia

By David Stevens
BUDAPEST, Oct. 23.—Besides the rich array of Bela Bartok's music, familiar and otherwise, spread over the six-week program of the Budapest Art Weeks, a fascinating commemorative exhibit has been mounted for the occasion by the Budapest Historical Museum in its new quarters in the first section of Buda Castle to be restored from wartime rubble.

It is not a vast exhibit—the memorabilia available is not, it seems, all that extensive. But true to its subject, what there is well thought out and well laid out.

Many of the photographs are rare, ranging from Bartok's early years to ones taken at his final concert in Budapest in 1940 before he went into voluntary exile from Europe's upheavals—unhappy years that would produce most of his great works before he died in New York at 64 in 1945.

On display is the Edison cylinder machine—a museum piece in its own right—with which he recorded Hungarian folk music, as well as the photos he took of the authentic folk musicians who performed for him.

In the background, meanwhile, the visitor could hear a modern tape recorder fill the room with a document on sound—of a piano-violin recital with Joseph Szigeti in the Library of Congress on Sunday, April 13, 1940, at 11 a.m. The program—a typical one for Bartok—was Beethoven's "Kreutzer Sonata," Debussy's Sonata and Bartok's Rhapsody No. 1 and Sonata No. 2.

Bartok Archives
Not far away, in a restored medieval house on Castle Hill, are the Bela Bartok Archives of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences, where a small permanent exhibit of a similar nature is open to visitors. Much of the material is similar, but it is somehow more personal.

Music in London

Virtues of 'Semele'

By Henry Pleasants

LONDON, Oct. 23.—A new production of "Semele" by the Sadler's Wells Opera at the Coliseum evokes an early autumn season which has already seen and heard a lot of Handel. "Scipio" and "Samson" have been given by the Handel Opera Society at the old Sadler's Wells Theatre in Islington. And Oxford University Press has just brought out "Handel and the Opera Seria" by Winton Dean, who knows more about Handel's opera than any man alive and writes about it with a rare combination of scholarship, insight, lucidity, wit and charm.

That Dean has a soft spot in his heart for "Semele" is easy to understand. It has all those virtues I have just attributed to him, and it has had, also, that kind of troubled history which is always so attractive to the scholar concerned with a masterpiece.

Its troubles began, in 1744, with its not being quite one thing or another. Handel had recently enjoyed the success of several of his finest oratorios, including "Messiah," and he offered "Semele" after the manner of an oratorio. The English public was offended by an oratorio dealing not with a biblical BARTOK OPERA—Olga Szonyi and Endre Uto in Bartok's "Bluebeard's Castle," which was performed as part of the Budapest Art Weeks.

There is the first typewritten page of a short speech, introducing his music, that he gave to the Pro Musica Society of Los Angeles in 1928, during his first visit to America. Crossed out is a sentence apologizing for his imperfect English accent. Instead the principal and secondary accents of every problematic word are neatly marked.

Some of the books from his library are shown—Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," Flaubert's "Salammbô," Berlioz's "Memoirs," all in the original languages, and the New Testament in Spanish. All have marginal notes as translation reminders.

There also is a cassette tape machine, here and there tapes which will be played on request. The most fascinating are unpublished recordings of Bartok playing some of his music on the piano, including the Suite (Op. 4) and parts of Mikrokosmos, preceding each with a short introduction in English. There also is a brief interview in French with a Belgian radio announcer, whose chief preoccupation seemed to be whether Bartok was familiar with Belgian music. No, the composer regretted, he had not had the opportunity to study it.

There is no particular reason for an American visitor to Budapest to feel musically displaced right now. "West Side Story" and "My Fair Lady" are doing brisk business in the repertoire of the Operetta Theater, the ticket lines for the forthcoming concerts of the Oscar Peterson Trio are formidable, and a recent new production of "Porgy and Bess" by the Hungarian State Opera is on display at the barnlike Erkel Theater.

The Gershwin opera drew a full and enthusiastic house at a matinee last Sunday. "Porgy" is not such a rarity in Europe these days, but elsewhere it has usually been given in English with the indispensable assistance of several black American singers in the principal roles. Here it is Hungarian all the way.

But musically everything was in place. "Porgy" has, it seems, enjoyed a certain popularity here ever since its first appearance on records in the 1950s, and the orchestra, and singers did right by Gershwin. Ferenc Begányi was a radiant, rich-voiced Porgy and if Eva Andor's Bess was a bit overdone, Maria Sudlik as Serena and Zsuzsa Dobransky as Clara came very close to the mark.

Shorts Take Over Where the Mini Left Off

By Hebe Dorsey

PARIS, Oct. 23.—Shorts are taking over from the mini-skirt and the result is more leg.

As the world's fashion industry switches to long with considerable aches and pains, the current ready-to-wear showings for next summer mark a definite skirt escalation. The message comes from way up. Yves Saint-Laurent, the only dictator left in fashions, planted his short bomb in his last July couture collection. It was almost a caricature of the late '60s look—Carmen Miranda velvet, turban, square-shouldered tatty fur coat, platform shoes and skirts hiked up to mid-thigh. The roomful of editors gasped. Surely it was a joke. "Not at all," Yves said after the show. "It's prophetic. Those clothes are forceful and I believe women are in that kind of mood." He added, making a fighting gesture with his first: Forceful, I suppose he meant women are tough.

Anyway, although his Rive Gauche collection won't be out until next week, it's reported that Saint-Laurent has done it again. He's making short dresses, several inches above the knee. This may be what the French have already nicknamed the nouveau court but there is no question that short it is. It is no longer the mini, which was stiff and sporty and worn with a silver of skirt. Colored stockings and high heels give it a strong, late '40s flavor. Despite all those minis and maxis, the short look is rampant in Paris. In his recent Revillon fur collection, Fernando Sanchez (who's a close friend of Saint-Laurent) showed lots of mini fur coats, including a patchwork mink one. He, too, used high heels and bright colors. "Short belongs to our time," he said. "I cannot believe that having had the miniskirt, women will ever accept hiding their legs."

The French, ready-to-wear manufacturers certainly felt that way too. At Cacharel's, Corinne Grandval revived the mini-skirt, worn with long jersey jackets, knee-high socks and again, those high heels. "I believe the mini and the maxi complement each other," Miss Grandval said. "It depends on the occasion and the time of day. To ride a bicycle, one doesn't wear a maxi skirt. I believe that after a winter of long clothes, women will feel like wearing short again. Besides, I'm against radical solutions. I think women should be free to wear what they want."

It's the same story with Daniel Hechter, one of the most successful French ready-to-wear manufacturers. "Mr. Hechter, who does a $4 million business with 250 American stores, said: "Bemlines" are important. For the first time in the history of fashion, a woman who feels like long should wear long and one who feels like short should wear short." For him, accessories and color are far more important than hemlines. But the nearest way to replace the mini is to wear shorts.

Not just for the beach or ball throwing, but also right in the city. The French collection have been full of shorts—from the coy bloomer to the tailored, anyone-kind. Some designers compromise with short shorts and matching maxi coats. Although the industry may well panic at this sudden change of gear, there really too much to fret about. The long look is well ahead as a definite resistance to changing. It's expensive, it's practical, it'll force its way just as surely as the mini on did.

Main Change
The main change, nowada: is that fashion doesn't mean clothes but costumes. Every woman should be able to be her cool and do her thing. She should open her closet and decide whether she was to be the clean-cut girl or the fragile, limp-shouldered Scott Fitzgerald false heroine, the aggressive, star-struck comic strip heroine—the big necked, tousled-hair Victorian queen. Somewhere in there, has to be herself. It's not a woman doesn't just do any more; she puts herself together and the bits and pieces are often more interesting than the expensive dress. The uniform is dead and mon which once could buy fashion just can't do it any more.

ART MARKET

Investors' Influence

By Souren Melikian

Oct. 23.—A series of important sales which have been held at Christie's and Sotheby's during the past two weeks to some very significant trends in the art market. All categories extremely high prices—several breaking world records—have been paid for major works. In sharp contrast, objects of quality, but not glamorous or big enough to attract investors, often fetched low prices.

The first sign of the buyers' inclination to take an interest in big fish only came at the auction of Chinese porcelain at Sotheby's on Oct. 5. The first part of the sale consisted of a fine selection of blue and white porcelain made in the Kang Hsi (late 17th century) from the collection of Capt. W.R. Clarke, class of Chinese art, so fashionable before World War I, to attract buyers shortly before World War II. It made a weak in recent years, but the prices at Christie's sale were not high. A beaker vase, 17 inches high, was inexpensive at $459, for its quality. Lot 41, a Yen-Yen vase, 18 inches high decorated with an imperial audience scene, made twice the price.

This wasn't much either in view of the superb draftsman-ship.

The second part of the sale consisted of the more popular of Famille Rose and export ware. The prices paid were all higher but, by and large, kept within reasonable limits. Lot 110, a nice set of 12 soup plates and ten dinner plates, aged with garlands and coats of arms, very much to European taste, fetched only $1,200. A pair of gold and silver tureens enameled with a peacock and blue porcelain among formal work made $1,880, again a very moderate price.

Contrasting Sales

Opposed to these pieces, which were pretty but not unusual, lots fetched high prices. The first was an important Famille Rose consisting of three baluster vases and covers of later date than the Kang Hsi period—and two beakers convex centers. It was knocked down at $25,200, an enormous amount of money. This was accounted for, first, by its orous provenance: Two of the covered baluster vases came the Prince Johannes von und zu Liechtenstein collection, second reason was the rarity of top quality, stable, brightly colored sets.

At the end of the auction, another lot, a pair of Famille figures of phoenix, fetched the breathtaking price of $30,240. helically, they might not be everybody's cup of tea: the colors raudy and the leering, sinister look of the birds didn't make particularly attractive. But they were huge (21 1/4 inches), perfect condition, easily identifiable in style and, generally, ting, of great rarity. In other words, they had all the making of a spectacular museum piece of the kind that investors looking for.

Trend Confirmed

In the following week the trend was confirmed by the unusually successful sale of archaic wares, also at Christie's. There were y pieces of the same caliber, i.e. big, in perfect condition, rare with a good pedigree, although of a different period and style. These fetched prices well over twice the most optimistic sales.

Next came three sales of quite a different nature, all at Sotheby's. On Oct. 13, the Renaissance works of art of Arthur ex-Wilsham (1871, Oct. 10-11) were dispersed. Even taking account the rarity of such objects, the bidding was high. ificantly the two highest prices were paid for the two pieces had the most valued pedigree. First, there was the command altar and cabinet from the Rothschild Paris collection which for $60,000, five times the estimate made by one of the leading dealers in France.

On Oct. 14, at the sale of the Goetz collection, five world records were broken due to the famous provenance of the pieces: their obvious museum-like quality. One Cossame was with-yn at a very high price, $360,000, because the reserve set by the r was even higher, $480,000. Here is proof that speculation tending the art market.

Finally, on Oct. 15, the second part of the collection of Fay n of New York City was auctioned at Sotheby's. I have pointed out the extraordinary quality of every single piece in this collection (EHT, July 25-26). A magnificent set of 12 George I dinner plates, made by Huguenot silversmith David Willemme in 1725 (225.5 ounces). They are of outstanding rarity and will no doubt eventually grace the show-cases of an American museum. However, a very fine pair of George III soup tureens went for only $6,960, although they weighed 239.5 ounces; they did not fall within the exceptional category.

The lesson to be derived from these apparently unrelated sales is that the art market has become highly speculative. It is now governed by the investor's criteria rather than the collector's standards. The market as such is not very strong because of the shortage of cash, but fantastic prices are being paid for those objects which belong in the top range of well-established, easily identifiable categories of art. Hence, the increased interest in glamorous provenance, the lack of interest in beautiful but unobtrusive art and the difficulties dealers encounter in selling little-known or controversial categories of art such as Luristan bronzes and Persian ceramics.

Five sales in London have been enough to show that the art market has entered a new era.

The Rembrandt portrait auctioned at Parke Bernet on Oct. 22 had to be withdrawn. Bidding stopped at $150,000, a ludicrous price for one of the most admired old masters. A Parke Bernet spokesman frankly admitted that "there just wasn't anyone who really wanted to buy it." This seems to bear out the view expressed privately by some European dealers that cash has become so short in America that private buyers as well as public institutions such as museums and foundations are holding back. If the trend is confirmed, the backlash will shortly make itself felt in Europe. Given the present wobbly situation of the art market, it might wreak havoc.

one another at the Alwin Gallery, 56 Brook St., W.1. Early in the '60s Watkins lived and painted in Spain, where he made good landscapes shimmering with light and heat. More recently, he has become increasingly abstract, with an entire series based on ancient calligrams and hieroglyphs. His present exhibition consists entirely of works in a new series, "Fonds marins," manifestly based on seascapes and the movements of tidal waters. They are by far the most successful of all his works, for though they are rooted in an intense observation of nature, they are extremely giv- Watkins' preoccupations with abstractions full scope.

The sculptor showing at the gallery is Roy Shiffin, an American now living and working in Spain. He studied architecture at the Cooper Union in New York, and sculpture in Mexico, so that even his smallest pieces have an archaic and an architectonic grandeur about them. He is recognizably figurative in his approach to his bronzes, which have what all first-rate figuration in sculpture has, a feeling of being slightly larger than life.

William Crozier, showing recent paintings, drawings and graphics at the Dean Gallery, 7 Portico St., W.2, is a man obsessed with death and isolation. "Some ten years ago, I painted my first skeletal figures. Today with a micrometer screw gauge you could measure the flesh that has grown upon them." The figures in landscape are invariably a single skeleton, and the landscapes themselves, the "Road to Chartres" or the trees in Holland Park are shadowed and haunted.

At the Archer Gallery, 23 Grafton St., are three simultaneous exhibitions—the sinuous bronze sculptures of Colin Webster Watson; cosmograms, which is to say abstract gouaches very similar to the surrealist decalcomanias, by the Austrian painter Edith Meinel; and social commentaries by the American painter Norman Norvick. This is an extremely interesting combination of talents, and well worth a prolonged visit.

At the Marjorie Parr Gallery, 265 King's Road S.W.2, Patrick Hall's watercolor landscapes are teamed with the work of eight artist potters, including the Leachs, Lucie Rie and Hans Coper.

Theater in London

'Major Barbara' Lives Again in Revival

By John Walker

LONDON, Oct. 23.—The Royal Shakespeare Company has not so much revived as given the idea of life to Bernard Shaw's "Major Barbara," which has joined the London season at the Aldwych Theatre.

Even the third act, with its tired old arguments and unconvincing conversion of Major Barbara into a lady bountiful ready to stir the spoon-fed workers of a model factory, even that comes up fresh, if not sparkling.

The play, 65 years after its first performance, seems oddly irrelevant despite the apparent topicality of the issues debated. The argument is between faith and charity, as represented by Major Barbara working for the Salvation Army among London's poor, and the ruthless capitalism of her millionaire father, selling arms and fomenting war across the world. Yet even accepting Shaw's premises, it dates badly. Poverty may well be a crime, but it is not the poor who are criminals. So the play resembles the clever and deliberately perverse after-dinner conversation of a somewhat garrulous old man.

But the old man is a genius, with a wit sharp enough to deflate hubbub and pomposity in an instant. And the debate is a genuine one. Ideas are advanced and tested in a way that is as rare on the West End stage today as it was in Shaw's own time.

In this version, the play would be better named "Andrew Undershaft," for it is dominated by the arms manufacturer, played with a massive authority by Ewan Morrison. Even Jodi Dench's brave Major Barbara fades into insubstantiality beside him. The devil seems to have all the best lines. I never thought I would feel sympathy for the silly Stephen Undershaft, but I did in the scene where his father explains the realities of power to him. Mr. Morrison delivering his lines with such crushing force and withering contempt.

The rest of the cast, as if realizing that the ideas are no longer enough to save the play, act for all the world as if they were appearing in a superior comedy by Oscar Wilde. It is something that Shaw might not have liked, but the result is devastatingly funny. Richard Pasco, in particular, succeeds in making the somewhat insufferable Adolphus Cusins, a Greek professor in love, a touching and diverting figure.

The opening act is a delight, too, with Elizabeth Spriggs, as Lady Britomart, revelling in an acerbic authority which would win approval from Lady Bracknell. Clifford Williams directs with high style, even if there are some irritating effects, such as the needlessly obtrusive scene shifters and the glee-club hymn-singing between scenes.

The Royal Court's experimental season "come together" has now opened, and seems at least to be attracting young audiences. Sunday, at the Court's Theatre Upstairs, brings the final performance by the Cartoon Archetypal Slogan Theatre of their new play "Auntie Maud Is the Happening Thing," which is a quick rundown, complete with loud explosions and ineffectual guitar playing, of the fate of the working class over the last 70 years. Auntie Maud, who represents the Tory party, turns out to resemble Neville Chamberlain. CAST is a radical group which uses simple means, song, caricature, and grotesque makeup or masks, to put its message across. What that message is, I don't know. At the moment, "Auntie Maud" is an incoherent mess. In six months' time, says CAST, it will have changed considerably, which is good news for those who believe in the benefits of progress.

The Court's coming week includes "Playback 625," an experiment using television sets as actors, and an evening of short plays by Samuel Beckett. Future delights include, on Nov. 1, a concert by Lifetime, the group formed by Miles Davis's former drummer Tony Williams, and Stoke-on-Trent's Victoria Theatre production of the documentary "1861 Whitby Lifeboat Disaster," written by Peter Terson, one of the best of the British playwrights, whose work is too rarely seen in London.

Around Paris Galleries

Lerjox, "The Assassination of Sharon Tate," Musée Galliera, 10 Avenue Pierre 1er de Serbie, to Nov. 22.

More than 50 large decorative canvases fill this big exhibition room with pleasant colors and competent stylistic distortions. In the middle of the back wall the patterns of a large painting depict a goat-faced figure wielding a knife over a thumb-sucking fetus lying in a small coffin laid on the stomach of a reclining female figure. What has this got to do with the hideous crime referred to in the title? Obviously the anecdote is there, but the paintings merely rehearse it in a formal way, without adding any visible insight that might eventually justify the choice of such a notorious and monstrous event as their subject.

Cartier-Bresson, Beaudin, Grand Palais, Avenue des Selles, to Nov. 30.

Ernst Cartier-Bresson is one of the outstanding photographers of our day and this exhibition is devoted to pictures taken all over France—some recent and some going back to 1944. Cartier-Bresson's ever alert eyes are constantly searching for some significant contrast, for the fleeting encounter of two worlds or two ages, or for some rare moment of harmony or human emotion. The on team before a castle in Dordogne harks back to the medieval illuminations of Les Très Riches Heures du Duc de Berry, the sharp-eyed girl on the terrace of a café is a vignette that only a camera as fast as the eye could catch. The exhibition as a whole is a fresh look at everyday life and at human nature as it reveals itself in France. The floods above are devoted to a big retrospective exhibition of the painter André Beaudin who is 75 this year. Beaudin has all his life favored mild colors in the pastel range and geometric forms. He strives toward a formal stylization that tends toward a certain blandness.

Liberal, Galerie de France, 3 Rue du Fbg-Saint-Honoré, to Nov. 11.

Smooth bronzes made of rounded and composite forms and a variety of original concepts in different sizes and metals. Aglaé Libéral, who was born in Greece, has been exhibiting her work in a number of galleries in Paris and New York since 1955. She handles her material in a pleasing manner and her sculptures have a firm elegance about them.

Max Papart, Galerie Camille Renault, 133 Boulevard Haussmann, to Nov. 14.

Max Papart's compositions show an original notion in search of an adequate formula.

Art by Stalinist

On View in Prague

PRAGUE, Oct. 23 (UPI).—The sculpture and paintings of Emanuel Fajma, whose avowedly pro-Soviet and Stalinist leanings helped keep him in obscurity for most of the last decade of political thaw in Czechoslovakia, went on display this week at one of Prague's main galleries.

Fajma, a flamboyant and colorful extremist who once boasted to a visitor that he had been "collaborating with the Soviet Union for 35 years," died nine months ago.

They seem to be dealing with the discontinuous aspects of our everyday life, wherein the mind is constantly being solicited by a variety of perspectives in random, tattered juxtaposition. This comes through quite clearly in some paintings that blend figurative allusions with abstraction. One may or may not enjoy his colors and the textures he occasionally uses, but the intention is there.

Vasarely, Vision Nouvelle, 6 Place des États-Unis, to early February.

Almost everything that Vasarely does is elegant proof of his virtuosity. This exhibition, one of limited editions of his compositions made out of colored blocks of a newly developed plastic material, is not an exception to the rule. The colors are characteristically strong and their juxtaposition makes the eye a bit restless. In some cases the blocks are movable and the owner can either assemble them according to three patterns provided by Vasarely, or produce his own variants.

NYSE Rate Proposals Draw Fire From SEC

By Eileen Shanahan

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (NYT)—The Securities and Exchange Commission today told the New York Stock Exchange that its proposed increase in commission rates on both the smallest and the largest stock transactions are unreasonable.

The rejection did not, legally, have the force of an order, but it appeared probable that it would have the same effect.

The SEC said that the proposed increases on transactions involving 100 to 499 shares are large, and should be cut back by 50 to 75 percent.

The smaller increases that the commission would produce over commissions that are in effect now, including the temporary surcharge, on orders of up to 199 shares. But the charges would be higher than those imposed at present on orders of 200 shares or more.

However, in transactions involving 400 shares or less, the charge would be less than the one the exchange asked the commission to approve last July.

The commission also said it found "unreasonable" for the NYSE to continue to set uniform, pre-set commission rates on the largest orders—involving $100,000 or more.

These orders should be separately negotiated on each individual transaction, the SEC said—a conclusion it seemed certain to cause repercussions not only in the brokerage community but also among institutional investors, such as mutual funds.

The SEC's overall position was that it would approve the exchange's proposed commissions, provided they were smaller on relatively small orders and—eventually, at least—smaller on the largest orders too.

Students of the issue have long contended that if price-fixing on large orders were ended, competition would bring the rates down.

PEOPLE IN BUSINESS

John T. Fogarty, 30, in charge of the National City Bank's French operations, has been named a vice-president of Citibank.

Ralston Purina International has named K. Michael Sarasin marketing director, consumer products, Europe, to be headquartered in Brussels.

and of the year. Mr. Volcker said there might be another cash offering before the end of the year, but added that the Treasury is raising some of the new funds by increasing the regular weekly and monthly offerings of Treasury bills—debt securities of less than a year's maturity.

For fiscal 1971 (ending next June), the administration has predicted a deficit of $1.5 billion, a figure which many economists now believe may reach $1.4 or $1.5 billion. Administration economists have not updated their estimate, but the bigger anticipated deficit would probably enlarge government financing activities next spring.

Effective interest rates on the new notes are 7 1/4 percent (for a 3 1/2 year note, maturing May 15, 1974, and selling at par value) and 7.5 percent for a 5-year 9-month note, maturing Aug. 15, 1979, and sold at a slight premium (100.50).

Rates reflected the recent easing of money markets. In April, for example, the Treasury offered new 3-year notes at effective rates of 7.88 percent and 6-year 9-month notes at 8 percent.

Although the new notes can be exchanged only for maturing notes, Mr. Volcker said that this offering would be followed quickly by a limited cash issue—notes that can be purchased directly.

This cash offering would help the Treasury meet its $4.5 billion target of new funds before the end of the year.

Jersey Standard Profits Up 10.5%

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—The giant U.S. oil industry, Standard Oil of New Jersey, reported yesterday a 10.5 percent jump in third-quarter earnings, which brought profits for the first nine months of the year a slim 0.2 percent above the similar 1969 level.

J.K. Jackson, SONJ chairman, said in releasing the net results that "profits were lower in the first three quarters, despite higher United States, largely as a result of increased taxes. The earnings improvement for the quarter occurred abroad" and was attributed to continued operating volume gains and a strengthening in petroleum product prices overseas, he said.

SONJ was the latest in a string of U.S. oil firms which noted that, while profit trends improved in the latest quarter, results in the United States have been less than glowing.

Teneco yesterday announced a 3 percent slip of three cents a share on average, in each of the first three quarters, despite higher revenue.

Today, however, Atlantic Richfield announced a 19 percent slide in third-quarter earnings, which took nine-month results 11.7 percent below the year-earlier level.

Atlantic was the only one of the oil giants to show a decline in revenue—of 1.5 percent in the quarter and a negligible 0.7 percent over the first nine months of the year.

Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey reported third-quarter earnings of $141.9 million, up from $128.3 million in 1969. Profits (millions) were $43.59, up from $39.59 in 1969.

Glamour Strength Spotlights Quiet Session on Wall Street

By Vartan G. Vartan

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (NYT)—The Dow Jones industrial average, underscoring the essential consolidation that has taken place in the market during the period, showed a net decline of nearly 4 1/4 points as an air of caution hung over the investment community.

This caution stemmed from the continuing impact of the General Motors strike, some disappointing developments in corporate profits and dividends, and the uncertainties posed by the Nov. 3 elections.

Standard & Poor's 500 gained 0.39 at 83.77 and the NYSE index edged up 0.22 at 454.64.

Tele. & Tel. Corp. was the most active issue, set the tone for the glamour, up 1 1/4 to 23 1/8.

Memorex, another supplier of computer peripheral equipment, took honors as the best point gainer among the actives. It bounced up 4 3/4 to 84. Nationalas rose 1 1/4 to 50 1/4 and ranked as the third most heavily-traded stock.

Elsewhere, International Business Machines advanced 7 to 295. One factor in its favor was the announcement by Trans World Airline of plans to use an IBM automated passenger reservation system.

Point-plus gainers in the glamour group included Beckman Instruments, Fairchild Camera, Walt Disney Productions, Polaroid, and American Research & Development.

The market's tone was resilient despite the lingering caution of investors. There were 707 advances and 563 declines. Volume, meanwhile, edged upward to 10.7 million shares from 9 million shares, rounding out a slow-paced week.

American Telephone eased 1 1/4 to 43 1/8 in brisk trading, its third straight fractional decline following announcement of plans to sell $500 million in debt securities.

Gold issues moved upward as prices in the London bullion market rose to another 11-month high. Campbell Red Lake Mines climbed 1 1/4 to 91 while Dome Mines edged up a point at 65.

U.S. Treasury Set to Raise $4.5 Billion in Fresh Funds

By Robert J. Samuelson

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The U.S. Treasury will borrow $4.5 billion more in addition to refunding all its maturing debt before the end of 1970, Paul Volcker, Under Secretary of the Treasury for monetary affairs, said yesterday.

The Treasury said it would offer two new debt obligations in exchange for $7.7 billion of Treasury notes maturing Nov. 15. The public holds $6 billion of the total.

Effective interest rates on the new notes are 7 1/4 percent (for a 3 1/2 year note, maturing May 15, 1974, and selling at par value) and 7.5 percent for a 5-year 9-month note, maturing Aug. 15, 1979, and sold at a slight premium (100.50).

Rates reflected the recent easing of money markets. In April, for example, the Treasury offered new 3-year notes at effective rates of 7.88 percent and 6-year 9-month notes at 8 percent.

Although the new notes can be exchanged only for maturing notes, Mr. Volcker said that this offering would be followed quickly by a limited cash issue—notes that can be purchased directly.

This cash offering would help the Treasury meet its $4.5 billion target of new funds before the end of the year.

Gross Suits Filed by TWA, Burroughs

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (NYT)—Burroughs Corp. suffered a setback yesterday in its quest for a larger place in the multi-billion-dollar computer industry as Trans World Airlines announced that it was discontinuing all efforts to use Burroughs computers in its automated passenger reservation and management information system.

The $38 million contract was one of the largest single agreements in the Burroughs portfolio.

TWA filed a suit against Burroughs here, seeking to recover damages exceeding $70 million and charges of misrepresentation and breach of contract. More than half the $70 million has already been charged to current expenses as incurred and the balance represents expenses expected to be incurred as a consequence of the discontinued project, the airline said.

Burroughs in turn filed an $11.5 million suit to recover all monies owed by TWA and past due under the contract.

A Burroughs spokesman said the company had "in no way made any misrepresentations with respect to its equipment and services."

TWA announced that it planned to use an automated system developed by International Business Machines Corp.

Curbs on Loan Volume Lifted at French Banks

PARIS, Oct. 23.—French bank credit restrictions were "completely and immediately" abolished today, Finance Minister Valéry Giscard d'Estaing announced.

The decision, which follows this week's half-point reduction to 7 percent in the Bank of France's lending rate to the nation's banks, is part of the government's program to stimulate the economy.

Recent statistics show that industrial production is leveling off, unemployment is rising and new investments are easing.

The credit restrictions, which put ceilings on the volume of loans banks could make, were imposed in late 1968.

The Crisis of the Self-Made Man

By Garry Wills. Houghton Mifflin Co. 617 pp. $16.

Reviewed by John Leonard

BEFORE plunging into a synopsis of Gerry Willis's astonishing book, one must give some account of Willis. To say that he is a contributing editor at Esquire, a syndicated newspaper columnist and the author of "The Second Civil War" is inadequate. "The Second Civil War" was one of America's racial agony. In his newspaper column, Willis has opposed our role in Vietnam and Attorney General Mitchell's role in Washington. His contributions to Esquire include a dissection of Spenser and a study of the new novel. Willis took his PhD at Yale in classics, is the author of a book on G.K. Chesterton and has written regularly over the past decade for William F. Buckley Jr.'s conservative Journal of National Review. Only by keeping these apparently contradictory facts in mind is the reader likely to be prepared for "Nixon Agonistes," which reads like a combination of H.L. Menckens, John Locke and Albert Camus.

Willis achieves the not inconsiderable feat of making Richard Nixon a sympathetic—even tragic—figure, while at the same time being appalled by him. But superb as it is, his "psycho-biography" of Nixon is not a study in psychology or an essay on political theory. "All our liberal values track back to a mystique of the earner," says Willis, whether the "market" is personal (self-regulation what the Market has done the man.

Willis writes with a scalpel wound in technicolor, drawing on literary sources both open and various. The report he is as eager for the raw detail as the theorist is as eager for the abstract. Nixon's relationship with his mother—like that of his father's relation to God, Abin's to the whole—was fascinated soured with fear a desire to supplant; almost a knowledge, nonetheless, whatever nobility one aspires to will come from the sweat of the brow. One gets considerable attention more often than any other count I've seen.

Finally, there is the ques of what to substitute for Market. Willis is a little vague on this, talking about "community." Not power to the community, but the building communities that are structures with the traditions and interests, instead of markets of individuals ideas. He is talking in a sort about our souls, and he does know how to save them. He sees them being lost daily in his country, a nation of Nixon or Whitthers, "undefended coherent taste," at the mercy of the market, "possessing it." His book is a stunning attempt to put that past, that we may all us escape it.

Swiss Lead Narrow In Tourney Bridge

ESTORIL, Portugal. O (A.F.)—Switzerland kept their last record in the Ebu Biri Championship a seventh-round 16-4 win over West Germany for a total of 108 points in the standings.

Second in the 13-day tournament, entered by 22 countries, was France one point behind The French players lost a round which took their total to 108 points.

Great Britain was fourth with 96 points trailing Austria.

Defending champion the Netherlands, with 87 points after the Netherlands 13-7 championship ends on October 17.

The major incident of the round was a protest by players from Ireland when they hit a slunk after the match was over. The protest was long and loud. The protest was upheld but the Irish still lost.

Knicks Gain Stride in Nipping Warriors

By Thomas Rogers

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (NYT).—The Knicks were here again last night for a game in the crowded Madison Square Garden.

A style vividly reminiscent of the year's championship drive, the Knicks overcame a poor first half, recouped an 11-point third-quarter deficit to pull away from San Francisco warriors just before the buzzer and walk off the floor with a 95-92 victory.

The Knicks, who won their 11th straight game, made the decision in five National Basketball Association games, were rebounded, outshot and outplayed by the Warriors in the last 24 minutes.

The Warriors led, 54-47, at the half because of a 38-22 rebound and superior field-goal shooting—43 percent to 36.5 for New York.

At the vaunted pressing New York defense started to assert itself midway through the third quarter, a few minutes after San Francisco had posted a 58-47 edge.

The Knicks forced eight San Francisco turnovers in the third quarter and took advantage of most of them to score. Scoring 9 points in 2 1/2 minutes lifted the Knicks to the lead, 63-62, and they began to finish the quarter.

At the end of the quarter, the Knicks had scored a total of 44 points in four previous games, led 9 of the 12 points last night in the final 12 minutes, including the shot that won the game.

After Walt Frazier had brought out the game's 11th tie, 92-92, at 1:45 to go, the teams exchanged misses. Frazier then asked a lay-up attempt by Ron Williams with 50 seconds remaining and the Knicks quickly brought the ball up court.

The ball was passed from hand to hand, until Riordan found himself open about 30 feet out to the right of the hoop. His looping left-handed shot found the mark and the Knicks went ahead, 94-92, with 41 seconds to play.

After Jeff Mullins missed a shot 18 seconds later, Riordan put the lock on the game with a foul shot with 6 seconds left.

The result canceled a fine effort by Jerry Lucas of the Warriors, who grabbed 23 rebounds and scored 18 points.

Bill Bradley, absent from the Knicks' line-up for the previous three games with an injured left hamstring muscle, played six minutes, hit 1 of 2 shots and, to coach Red Holman's mind, appeared "a little rusty."

Bradley's replacement as starter, Carmelo Russell, led the Knicks scorers with 20 points. Willis Reed had 16.

Rockets 148; Cavaliers 110. San Diego led by Elvin Hayes with 40 points and John Block with 29, scored a 140-110 victory over Cleveland in an NBA game last night.

Pistons 126; Hawks 101. The backcourt combination of Jimmy Walker and Dave Bing sparked scrappy Detroit to their sixth straight victory of the season, a 120-101 victory over Atlanta.

The rules call for a fighter to take a mandatory eight count if he is knocked down, but the bout will not be stopped no matter how many times a fighter is floored in a round. In non-championship bouts, it is usually a technical knockout if one man goes down three times in a single round.

"I'm still the champion," Clay said, "so we should use championship rules. The people of the world will recognize the winner of this fight as champion."

The 26-year-old Clay was deposed as champion in 1967 for having refused induction into the Army and has not fought since he knocked out Zora Foley March 23, 1967.

The two fighters agreed earlier to use the New York State scoring system. That system is basically on a round basis, but the three of officials, two judges and a referee, also give bonus points for particularly one-sided rounds. If each fighter wins the same number of rounds (7-7, for example), the winner of the bout is determined by points.

The house was filled with people: Floyd Patterson's former manager, Gus D'Amato; two Atlanta detectives who have been assigned as 24-hour body guards; Jimmy Jacobs, the handball champ with the world's largest collection of fight films; and the familiar regulars—trainer Angelo Dundee, brother Rahman (Randy), personal photographer and good-luck charm Howard Bingham and the poet laureate of the clan, Drew (Bundini) Brown.

NOW INHALE—Ali's chest (44 1/2 inches) measured by trainer Angelo Dundee.

Ali (Don't Call Me Clay) Is Back

By John Hall

ATLANTA, Oct. 23.—The whole world is here just to see two men jump around in a ring," said the man of the moment. "There must be something to it."

He was dressed in a dark suit and a light-colored shirt. He was sitting on a couch in the living room, sportswriter at his elbow hanging on every word. He was the pulse and the pulse was beating.

He was friendly, warm, entertaining and nostalgic. He went non-stop for 90 minutes, touching all the bases from his Kentucky boyhood to the Rome Olympics of 1960 and right up to the minute.

For me, it has been five years between visits with Ali. The last time was just before the second Liston bout in Lewiston, Maine—the ill-fated one-round execution when Sonny Liston went out with one tender tap on the cheek.

Emotionally, he has now come full circle. With all his private problems, he seems now to appreciate the little joys again. His words reveal a new maturity, an understanding, and he's at peace with himself.

Naturally, there's mystery as to what he will be physically Monday night. Nobody can be sure what 3 1/2 years of idleness have done to him. Nobody will really know about his reflexes—those lightning legs and hands—until the bells start ringing.

It's his first fight since March 21, 1967, when he knocked out Zora Foley in New York—his ninth successful title defense. Most of the time since Foley, Ali has been devoted to speaking at colleges and writing a book while battling and appealing a draft-dodging conviction in the courts.

Wild Imitations. He punctuated his conversation by frequently leaping to his feet and doing wildly animated, arm-swinging imitations of boxers he's recently been admiring on film—Kid Gavilan, Johnny Bratton, Ray Robinson and Archie Moore.

He also got around to doing Joe Frazier, suddenly clumping awkwardly across the room bent over like the Hunchback of Notre Dame.

He kept interrupting himself to talk about how much he misses his family at home in Philadelphia. He said his wife phones him every morning at 4 a.m. to start him out on his roadwork. "She's my alarm clock," he said.

Remarkably, he looks as trim and quick as he ever did at his most active—down from 238 pounds six weeks ago, to 210 after his latest workout. "No big secret," he said. "You just run and keep running till it hurts."

He jumped up to do another imitation. It was Cassius Clay. Ready or not, Ali is back with his nagging wife.

The fire broke out just before midnight in the barn housing 55 horses. Despite a light rain, it was a roaring inferno by the time firefighters arrived.

About 30 horses were led to safety at the height of the hour-long blaze, but many terrified animals roaming the area interfered with rescue attempts, track workers said.

Brutus & Black Hawks 3. John Bucyk's goal with just over 13 minutes remaining gave Boston a comeback 3-2 tie with Chicago and preserved the Bruins' "long home-ice unbeaten streak."

Wichita State Returns to Grid Wars

By Neil Amdur

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (NYT).—Marvin Kellum has never played an organized game of 11-man football. Eight-man, yes. Rag-tag, sure, but around his home town of Leocompton, Kan. (pop. 600), it was difficult enough finding 11 players for two teams.

Tonight, however, when Wichita State University meets high-powered Arkansas in Little Rock, the 6-foot-3-inch, 200-pound Kellum may draw the assignment of covering one of college football's top pass receivers, the Razorbacks' Chuck Dicus.

The occasion will be prompted by the decision of Wichita State players to resume their football season, following the Oct. 2 plane crash that took the lives of 30 persons, including 13 teammates, the head coach and athletic director.

None of the nine players who survived the crash, including the team's starting quarterback and leading rusher, will participate tonight. To restore some depth to the squad, 43 freshmen, led by Kellum and a pair of promising quarterbacks, Rick Baehr and Tom Owen, have been approved for varsity competition by the Missouri Valley Conference.

"It's really something when you consider the last game Kellum played was eight-man football," said Bob Seaman, the assistant coach at Wichita State, who inherited the head job after coach Ben Wilson's death. "It's a long way from high school eight-man to college."

The outcome of the Arkansas-Wichita State game was never in doubt before the tragedy. But today's college program is filled with games that could shuffle conference standings and possibly post-season bowl pictures.

In the East, resurgent Pittsburgh, with a 4-1 win-loss record, can inch closer to the Lambert Trophy by beating disheartened Miami. The Ivy League race should develop its leaders after games involving Dartmouth-Harvard, Yale-Cornell and Princeton-Pennsylvania.

Dartmouth and Yale remain unbeaten but Harvard is coming off a thrilling 27-24 victory over Cornell, and the Big Red has the country's No. 1 rusher, Ed Mariano, who is averaging 187 yards rushing per game.

Two of the country's better quarterbacks, Jim Plunkett of Stanford, and Dennis Dummitt of University of California, Los Angeles, will duel tonight in the Coliseum. Plunkett, the Heisman Trophy prospect, already has broken the national collegiate career record for total offense en route to 10 victories over Arkansas and Southern California. Dummitt has thrown 14 touchdown passes in the Bruins' six games.

Boston College, beaten only by Penn State in four games, can take a giant step toward national recognition against unbeaten Air Force. The game matches the Falcons' fine quarterback, Bob Parker, third in total offense, against B.C.'s Fred Willis, fifth nationally in rushing.

The South, still trying to recover from Southern Mississippi's victory over Archie Manning and the Miss last week, has unbeaten, high-scoring Auburn against once-beaten Louisiana State, No. 1 in rushing defense. Florida and Tennessee will settle leftovers from last year's Gator Bowl, won by the Gators, 14-13.
